FOREWORD

What is the good life? By whatever criteria one seeks to answer this question, he can exemplify them in the college environment. The good life, we are told by our faculty, is the examined life. The good life, we are told by our deans, contains the search for spiritual and moral values as well as the striving for social grace. The good life is the joyous life, we tell ourselves in moments of relaxation. The good life is the directed life, we are told by the men and women who head our organizations. What gives dignity and meaning of life, we are told by the fast men of track, football, and basketball, is excellence of technique in doing something that expresses life. All these definitions contribute to a whole. Taken together, they present variety that makes life full, exciting, challenging, and gives the realization that the good life can exist. The HAWK invites your perusal of all the aspects of the good life at U.M.E.S. in 1970-71.

DEDICATION
PROF. RICHARD H. THOMAS

Mr. Richard Thomas has been at U.M.E.S. for 32 years. He now resides in a lovely new home with his wife, Claudia, and two of his children, Grace and Calvin. His other daughter, Diane, and her husband, Claude Young, Jr., reside in Washington, D.C.

Mr. Thomas says that he is confident of the growth in academic programs at U.M.E.S., but hopes that we (people) don't ever get to the point where we eliminate the culturally deprived Black Student from educational opportunity. Educating the deprived has been our number one mission in the past, and Mr. Thomas hopes it will always continue as an integral part of our educational process.

Mr. Thomas has exemplified to all at U.M.E.S., especially to the "young people," that love and understanding is essential to all men. Mr. Thomas, for all that you have given, both materially and spiritually, we dedicate the 1970-71 HAWK to you.

Often one hears the phrase, "It's not whether you win or lose, it's how you play the game." Well, the Maryland Hawks played an exceptional season, yet it doesn't seem as though lady luck was on our side so far as a victory was concerned. Still there was one win that we Hawks are proud to sport and that was a 32-14 victory over Norfolk State College.

Reigning in the year 1970-71 is charming Miss Wanda Stewart, of Princess Anne, Maryland. She typifies the vivacious attractive coeds who have been chosen through the years by the students at this institution to represent all that's best in young college women.
